DEPARTMENT WORK FOR LAST YEARS

Accomplishments During First Wilson Administration Reviewed.

FORCE OF PRESIDENT SEEN

Accomplishments of the various departments of the government during the first four years of the Wilson administration have been reviewed by the House of Representatives today. The review was made by the committee on the administration of the House, which was held in the House chamber. The committee was headed by Mr. Charles D. McNary, chairman of the committee. The review was a comprehensive one, covering the work of all the executive departments. The committee found that the Wilson administration had accomplished much during its first four years. It had established a new era of efficiency and economy in the government. It had also accomplished much in the way of foreign policy. The committee praised the work of the administration in many respects, but it also pointed out some areas where improvement was needed. The review was a thorough one, and it provided a valuable record of the work of the Wilson administration.

Confronted by Mexican Situation.
When President Wilson took office four years ago, a situation existed beyond the Mexican border that demanded at once the attention of the State, War and Navy departments. The Dictator Huerta, ruled in Mexico City, while the forces of the revolution were active in the provinces. The situation was a dangerous one, and it required the attention of the government. The Wilson administration faced a difficult task in dealing with the Mexican situation. It had to balance the interests of the United States with the interests of the Mexican people. The administration's policy was to promote peace and stability in Mexico. It sought to bring about a settlement of the Mexican situation that would be acceptable to all parties. The administration's efforts in this regard have been reviewed by the House today.

Department of Justice
There have been two Attorney Generals at the head of the Department of Justice since the present administration has been in power. James C. McReynolds was the first selection of President Wilson. Upon his elevation to the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States, Thomas Watt Gregory, at the time an assistant attorney general, was named as his successor. Gregory has since been Attorney General. The department has been busy during the four years of the Wilson administration. It has handled many important cases, and it has also been involved in the prosecution of several criminals. The department's work has been reviewed by the House today.

Progress Made by Army.
For the army, enormous strides toward supplying an adequate reserve of guns and ammunition have been made. The National Defense Council, with Secretary Baker at its head, has begun the task of co-ordinating all commercial activities for war uses. The regular establishment has been increased by many thousands of men. The force of more than 200,000 regulars and guardsmen has been assembled on the border, giving high officers their first chance in years to direct large bodies of troops.

Important Laws Enacted.
As a result of administrative action a number of highly important laws, destined, it is felt, to have lasting effect on the economy of the country, were enacted. These were the cotton futures act, the United States grain standards act and warehouse act, the federal aid road act and in part for the federal farm loan act. During the administration the office of the Agricultural Department, and the department of agriculture, of which David Franklin Houston is Secretary. Under the leadership of Mr. Houston that half of agricultural embracing the marketing of farm products, rural finance and rural organization received great attention. Before 1913 little systematic thought had been devoted to these phases of national life, either in the state or in the nation.

Under Secretary McAdoo.
During William G. McAdoo's incumbency of the Treasury portfolio the federal reserve system has been created, with results recognized everywhere. There has also been a reorganization of the Treasury Department. The federal farm loan banks, as part of the Treasury Department, is now organizing farm loan banks.

Chief Justice Shepard Renders a Decision in Case of Subpoena for Non-Resident.
A non-resident even in voluntary attendance upon a judicial hearing in the patent office in which his interests demand his presence is immune from service of process in a civil proceeding brought against him in the local courts, according to the decision of the Court of Appeals rendered today by Chief Justice Shepard. The court affirmed the decision of the District Supreme Court, which had quashed service of a subpoena in an injunction proceeding on Arthur P. Manchester and Harry W. Spooner, brought by George S. Engle.

Russians Take Hamadan.
PETROGRAD, March 4, via London, March 6.—The capture of Hamadan, in Persia, slightly more than 100 miles from the Mesopotamian border, was officially announced by the war office today. The town was taken from the Turks, March 2. Russian troops also are on the offensive further northwest, and have captured a village within two miles of Bijar, eighty miles northwest of Hamadan and about the same distance from the border.

Final Rites for S. M. Plumley.
Funeral services for Samuel M. Plumley, prominent contractor and builder for many years in this city, who died Sunday morning at his home, 1145 New Hampshire avenue, were held this afternoon at his late residence.

the fourth year since the old Department of Commerce and Labor split in two, and became two separate and distinct departments of the government. Outstanding features of the Commerce Department's work since has been the development of methods for assisting American business to increase its foreign trade, the establishment of "commercial attaches" in various large cities abroad, and various plans for the conservation of such of the resources of the nation as some under the scope of the department.

First Four Years.
The Department of Labor rounds out its first four years of separate existence. A banquet held March 1, at which Secretary William B. Wilson was the only speaker, helped employees of the department to celebrate the event. During the four years the federal employment service was established and put into operation, and is at present doing yeoman service in finding positions throughout the country for returning national guardsmen who may be without employment when they lay down the musket. A District of Columbia division of the employment service was established last week. The work of the children's bureau has attracted attention. Through the activities of the department and its co-operators many labor disputes throughout the country have been settled amicably. The Interior Department, under the administration of Secretary Lane, continued its large place in the work of the nation, its many bureaus making care of the interests of the people. Striking accomplishments of the past four years were the beginning of work on the Alaskan railroad, the completion of the Arrowrock dam in Idaho, probably the largest work of its kind in the world.

Under Secretary McAdoo.
During William G. McAdoo's incumbency of the Treasury portfolio the federal reserve system has been created, with results recognized everywhere. There has also been a reorganization of the Treasury Department. The federal farm loan banks, as part of the Treasury Department, is now organizing farm loan banks.
